

ORANGE FORK AWARD
TO BE PRESENTED WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28
AT TASTE 2016

Louisville is recognized nationally for its performing, entrepreneurial and culinary arts. What we have experienced in recent years is the coming together of farmers, producers, purveyors, chefs and consumers, making it the epicentre of the sustainable food movement, promising to help shape the future of the national sustainable food landscape. The professional enthusiasm and talent of our Commonwealth has been wholeheartedly embraced by a city that knows and appreciates great food and the people behind the creations.

Through three categories, Health, Business and Community, the Orange Fork Award recognizes individuals, organizations, and communities that embody the spirit of promoting a sustainable food system with uncompromising excellence for the community. The vision for this award is to inspire and empower individuals, organizations and communities to continue to grow, change and be relevant by constantly challenging their assumptions and affirming their intellectual courage.

Nominees should show a commitment to innovation, sustainability, inspiration and change initiation. The inaugural Orange Fork Award was awarded to Mayor Greg Fischer and in the years to follow we have recognized local and independent business owners and food producers who have helped shape Louisville's internationally recognized food culture through innovation and tireless effort.

2015 Winners:

Community:

Karen Moscowitz – New Roots Inc / Fresh Stop Projects

Business:

Bruce Ucan – Mayan Cafe

Susan Wiltshire – Wiltshire Pantry

Nomination submissions for the Orange Fork Awards are due September 1, 2016.
